My Treatment Philosophy

I believe therapy is a process of healing and rediscovery of oneself in body, mind, emotions, and behaviors. I practice a strengths-based approach, helping one to reduce maladaptive thinking patterns by focusing on their strengths, and to help them reach their goals.

A little bit about me ...

My husband and I have five adult children and four grandchildren. I love nothing more than spending time with my family, I enjoy reading, all things outdoors in summer and watching football; from high school to NFL.
